VOLUME XXVIII

The Will of Mary F. Hedges Sustained.

The June term of the Bourbon Circuit Court adjourned Saturday night a few minutes before 11 o'clock, after the jury in the Mary F. Hedges will case had brought in the following verdict:

"We, the jury, find the paper before us of date April 12, 1905, to be the last will and testament of Mary F. Hedges."

(Signed.) "E. F. RASH, Foreman."

The trial of the Hedges will case had been in progress since last Tuesday morning, and had been stubbornly and bitterly contested throughout the week.

The trial of the case owing to the prominence of Judge Russell Mann and family, to the latter of whom the testator left the bulk of her estate, and the large number of nephews and nieces who joined in the suit to contest the will, attracted the largest crowds seen at a trial in Bourbon county in years. During the arguments the court house was taxed to its capacity, many being unable to gain admittance.

Owing to the lateness of the hour when the rebuttal testimony was finished only two arguments were made, each being limited to one hour and fifteen minutes. Hon. C. J. Bronston first spoke for the contestant, and Col. Robt. B. Franklin closing for the will. Both gentlemen made strong speeches and were highly complimented on their efforts.

There was general disappointment throughout the large crowd present that Col. John R. Allen did not make a speech as many attended the Saturday night session especially to hear the speech of this gifted lawyer and orator. During the trial of the case Judge Stout fined Mr. Bronston $10 for contempt of court, and to show just what was said and done in regard to this fine we give the court stenographer's report, viz:

Mr. Bronston. "Was it on Sunday or during a school day?"

The Court. "Mrs. Swango, you need not answer any more such questions as that. Save your exception to that ruling."

Mr. Bronston. "I will not ask any more."

The Court. "I said that she need not answer any more such questions as that."

Mr. Bronston. "Do I understand Your Honor to say that I have asked all that Your Honor will permit along that line?"

The Court. "I certainly did. What year, what month, what day, what day of the month, what day of the week, morning, noon, or night, afternoon or evening. Yes, I say, don't ask her any more such questions."

Mr. Bronston. "I save an exception to the language of the court, as well as to the rulings of the court."

The Court. "Mr. Clerk, enter a fine of ten dollars against Mr. Bronston. If he does not immediately pay it, Mr. Jailer, take him to jail; pay it immediately."

Mr. Bronston. "I haven't the money, Your Honor. I will give a check for it."

The Court. "No, your check don't go here."

Mr. Bronston. "Then, perhaps I can borrow, if some friend—"

Mrs. Miller. "Here it is, Mr. Bronston."

Mr. Bronston. "If Your Honor will permit it to go upon the record, I mean upon the bill of exceptions."

The Court. "Certainly. Very well. Now, put this statement in. Counsel, if you sneer at the court again, you go to jail."

Mr. Bronston. "Will Your Honor permit me to say—"

The Court. "Sit down. I made that statement. It doesn't call for any reply to me. Take your seat."

Mr. Bronston. "I don't mean, Your Honor, to be offensive to the court—"

The Court. "Mr. Bronston, take your seat. I will not argue this matter with you. Not another word out of you. Take your seat."
